

Mucormycosis after scorpion sting: case report.

Pourahmad M¹, Sepidkar A, Farokhnia MH, Tadayon SM, Salehi H, Zabetian H.

Author information

Abstract

Mucor is a fungus, which give rise to opportunistic infection in immunocompromised patients. We described a 55-year-old immunocompetent woman with cutaneous mucormycosis after scorpion sting. Mucormycosis may happen in patients with intact immunity and is not allocated only to patients with immune deficiency.

© 2013 Blackwell Verlag GmbH.

KEYWORDS:

Mucormycosis; immunocompromised patients; immunological competence; scorpion; sting